READY FOR INVASION.

The Army of the Potomac Committees Working Hard Last Night-The Reports.

The committees were very active last night at the Ebbitt house, and had plenty to report in the way of progress. They are nearly ready for the great to-day's reunion, though there is pleuty yet to do. The men in charge seem to be entirely capable, and if the sub-committee not yet heard from come up with subscriptions as well as those who turned in their lists to date last night, there will be ample wherewithal to give the visiters such a taste of Washington as will bring them a taste of Washington as will bring them back every year.

Of course it is understood that the men constituting the committee are only human, and they expect that mere of the wealthy and progressive Washingtonians will come forward and do what some have already done—send their checks in without waiting to be called upon. There are some known to the committee who have a clever way of doing this, and they will probably be heard from to-day. That will swell the list.

These are the names and amounts in addition to those previously published, though it is not a full report from all the committees:

A gentleman living in Washington, where A gentleman living in Washington, where there is less annoyance from smoke than in any other city, has invented a very simple contrivance which he claims will bring relief to the smoke blind residents of the smokiest cities in the world. His invention is a very simple one. The idea simply is to convey the crhaust steam from the engine, in all large establishments where engines are used, and from such establishments where engines are used, and from such establishments the difficulty zero. from such establishments the difficulty genraily comes, to the chimney, and there force in the form of spray diagonally upward across the draught. The smoke thus compelled to pass through its jet of steam and is thereby urfiled, the carbon and other offensive materials of the carbon and other offensive materials. er arising from imperfect combustion, being noistened, falls back into the furnace and is consumed, the coloriess gas only escaping.
The spray is evenly distributed through an exhaust pipe terminating in a perforated rim running entirely ground the inside of the draft, and is thus a fuel saver as well.

The device is not yet patented, but it is said all have been compelled to regraduate, and to be in successful operation in at least one large establishment in town. If it could only under the act as surplus graduates. The be applied to Washington's smoky gas burn-ers it would prove a priceless blessing.

The court of claims yesterday rendered a unanimous decision in the test case of Leopoid vs. the United States. This suit was brought nominally for a difference of pay, but in fact to determine the status of the cadet engineers who graduated at the naval academy in the years 1881 and 1882. The Navy department held that they were the chimney, the perferations shooting the spray upward and toward the center. Besides serving to purify the smoke it regulates that act into naval cadets, and their pay cut is
